Imagine you walk into your office, with the temperature just right. You sit down and a very valuable and meaningful day begins. This is the kind of smart office that engineers are trying to make. It uses technology to help workers perform their best at work.

It can be bad for your health if you sit in front of a desk for too long. For example, it can cause pain in the back and the neck. Sanon, a company in Zhejiang, built UP7 to deal with this. As a smart lifting desk, UP7 can tell how long a user has been sitting in the chair. When it reaches the setting time, it will “tell” the user to stand up and walk around. It does this by either shaking the table or sending messages to the user's phone.

The company also invented a kind of smart chair to match with the table. “The chair is so comfortable. It can adjust its arms and height according to your body shape , ” a user in Zhejiang said on Xiaohongshu.

In smart offices, you probably won't use paper notebooks. Instead, you can try electronic paper books to put your work online.N10 from Hanvon Technology in Beijing, is a new “notebook” like this.It uses a screen that doesn't produce much light.Users write or draw with an electronic pen on the screen.

“ It is just like reading and writing on real paper , ” a user said.

“ You can organize, search and save notes easily.You usually need several big paper notebooks to do what the electronic notebook does.”

()66.What is the main idea of Paragraph 1?

- A.A smart office will make the work day longer.
- B.A smart office will offer more jobs to engineers.
- C.A smart office can help workers work at their best.

()67.How does UP7 protect users' bodies?

- A. By making calls to users.
- B.By stopping users from sitting for too long.
- C.By moving the chair to relax users' bodies.

()68.What does the underlined word “adjust” in Paragraph 3 probably mean?

- A.Miss. B.Change. C.Depend.

()69.Why is N10 better than a paper notebook?

- A.Because N10 has a big screen.
- B.Because N10 can provide light for people to read.
- C.Because N10 can easily organize, search and save notes.

()70.In which part of a newspaper may the passage come from?

A.Popular Science. B.Social Behavior (行为). C.Weather Conditions.

So far, China has successfully sent a large number of satellites(卫星) and spaceships into space.Space scientists have been greatly inspired(赋予灵感) by the old stories and ancient famous people when giving them names.

Since thousands of years ago, Chinese people have dreamed of going to the moon.Chang'e Flies to the Moon is one of the most popular stories.As you can see, China's first man-made satellite to circle around the moon was named Chang'e I.More interestingly, the moon rover(巡视器) was named after the Jade Rabbit, who is the partner of Chang'e in the story.These old stories carry people's best wishes and dreams.With the development of science and technology, our scientists have made them come true.

Kua Fu Runs After the Sun is another story to show how much ancient Chinese people wanted to know about the unknown world.Now, Kua Fu is going with the scientists to “visit” the sun, because we have a space project called Kua Fu Mission.

Besides the ancient stories, space scientists also get ideas from ancient famous people.For example, Mozi, an ancient scientist, discovered that light travels in a straight line over 2, 000 years ago.Hi s discovery made space study take a big step at that time. So, China's first quantum(量子) science satellite was named Mozi, making China the first country in the world to achieve quantum communication between satellites and the ground.

From such simple things as giving names to the satellites, we can see how great our traditional culture is and what influence it has on our modern science and technology.

()71. In China, space scientists get ideas from _____ when naming satellites.

① old stories ② traditional projects ③ ancient famous people ④ popular inventions

A. ①② B. ①③ C. ②④

(A)72. What do we know about Chang'e I according to the passage?

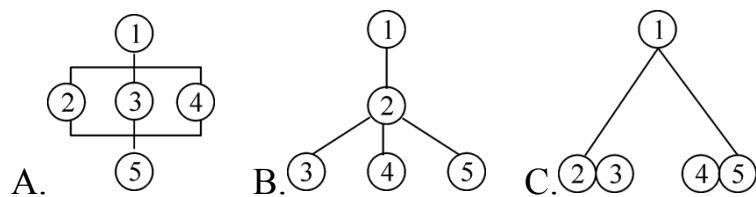

A. It moves around the moon. B. It protects the Jade Rabbit.

C. It “visits” the sun with the scientists.

()73. How does the writer support his opinion in Paragraph 4?

A. By listing numbers. B. By comparing facts. C. By giving an example.

()74. Which is the right structure of the passage? (① = Paragraph 1
② = Paragraph 2, ...)

() 75. What's the writer's main purpose of writing the passage?

- A. To spread the traditional Chinese culture.
- B. To explain how our scientists develop the space industry.
- C. To tell how traditional Chinese culture influences our space science.
