五、阅读理解

While learning about history from books, why not use the power of the internet to learn more? Here some bloggers (博主) show us nature in their eyes on their accounts (账号).

Uncle Cool's Animal WorldIt is an account run by Huang Xin. He introduces animals to internet users in interesting ways. In one of his videos, he compares birds to different kinds of people in A Dream of Red Mansions (《红楼梦》). “I hope my videos help connect people with the wonderful nature and make people love animals,” said Huang.

Nature in Our EyesLu Jing and Hui Dong are two plant lovers. They run the account on Douyin and Bilibili. Their journey through the forest has been full of challenges. But they can tell plants' stories in a simple way. And what attracts the audience (观众) is their introduction to the culture and folk stories behind plants. They hope to help the audience get to know the plants around us through their stories.

Fact of Wild InsectsIt is an account made by Liu Pengyu and his insect-loving friends in 2018. They share videos of rare (稀少的) insects on social media. “People step on many insects without realizing some insects are as special as pandas,” Liu said. The team hopes more people will join them to protect insects.

A new game is becoming popular with young people: tens or even hundreds of people come together, choose to be “cats” or “mice”, share locations on their phones, and then play hide-and-seek in a big open-air space.

Young people say that this game not only gets people to exercise but also throws them into the joys of childhood memories. It helps them deal with pressure and turns running into a fun social game.

On Sept. 24, I went to experience the activity with Patrick McCarthy in the park. There were around 30 people. Most of us didn't know each other. The game had two rounds (轮). In the first round, five people were “cats” and the rest were “mice”. With five minutes for “mice” to run and hide, the “cats” found them using the locations they shared on a map app. The second round was group competition.

We all played hide-and-seek when we were little. When I invited McCarthy, he asked, “What's the purpose of playing this game as an adult (成人)?”

It turned out (结果是) that the game was a joyful experience for him. The use of GPS made it much more fun. “It was a creative way of bringing something new to old games with technology,” said McCarthy. “It is a good way to make friends, as they need teamwork.”

For me, it's good that this activity got me moving as I'm not so interested in doing sports in my daily life. However, I could have had more fun if the park weren't so big.

51. Why is the new game popular with young people according to Paragraph 2?
- A. It brings fun for them.
 - B. It gives them no pressure.

- C. It improves their memories. D. It gets them to do less sports.
52. What can we know about the new game?
- A. “Cats” are more than “mice”.
- B. “Cats” find “mice” with a map app.
- C. Players need to know each other well.
- D. The space for the activity is very small.
53. What does the underlined word “it” refer to in Paragraph 5?
- A. The teamwork. B. The technology. C. The fun. D. The game.
54. What does the writer think of the game?
- A. He thinks the game is creative.
- B. He thinks the game makes him do sports.
- C. He believes the game isn’t interesting.
- D. He believes the game helps him make friends.
55. What’s the passage mainly about?
- A. A new way to play hide-and-seek.
- B. A joyful experience of playing games.
- C. The rules for playing hide-and-seek.
- D. The importance of technology in games.

Wang Jibing, a 55-year-old deliveryman, has just published (出版) his second poetry collection I Love this World Clumsily (笨拙地).

Wang has tried to make a living in many ways. He used to work as a builder, a garbage collector, and now he is a deliveryman in the city of Kunshan, Jiangsu Province. He sends food to customers every day.

Since 2009, Wang has written over 4,000 poems on many topics, including his working experiences in different cities. Poetry writing comes from his long-term love for reading. Wang thought reading saved him. In the 1980s, Wang worked in Shenyang, Liaoning Province. One day he found a bookstall. He picked up a book and began reading and kept reading every night. Later Wang tried to write poems online. And the “poems of a deliveryman” gradually became known.

After working as a deliveryman, his poems have experienced great changes in style. Wang says his work allows him to talk with more people and experience more things. He enjoys the job as a deliveryman. It has encouraged him greatly.

Wang's poems, simple yet real, are seen as a tool to process his feelings, especially the personal experiences he has during his work. In one of his poems Man in a Hurry, he wrote:

Wind is born from air in a hurry.

A knife is forged (锻造) from in a hurry.

...

People in a hurry have no seasons.

He only has one stop after another.

His world is about the name of a place.

His poems moved many people, who share similar struggles and negative feelings in their lives. "No matter how stressful (有压力的) life is, poetry makes me confident and happy," says Wang.

56. What does Wang Jibing do now?

57. What does Paragraph 3 mainly tell us?

A. Wang's difficult life.

B. Wang's poetry collections.

C. Wang's love for reading.

D. Wang's work in Shenyang.

58. What can we know about Wang Jibing?

A. He has only worked in two different cities.

B. He encourages us to work as deliverymen.

C. He seldom talks with others while working.

D. He gets topics of writing poems from work.

59. What's Wang's poem Man in a hurry probably about?

Communication between people of different cultures is more important than ever. Most people now understand how important it is to know something about different cultures and languages. 66

- Speak slowly and clearly.

It is very important to express your ideas and purpose clearly. Make sure there are no mistakes by speaking clearly and not too fast.

- 67

After each of your questions, wait for the other side to speak. In an everyday conversation, this can seem strange. But in cross-cultural situations, this style makes the conversation much easier.

- Give encouragement.

68 If the people you are speaking with are having trouble finding the right words, you can support them. Tell them not to be shy in communication.

- Use everyday language.

It is usually the best not to use the language that only native people know. It will often not be understood by people from other countries. 69

- Make jokes properly.

Using jokes can make the communication more enjoyable. However, people from other cultures may not be comfortable with some native jokes. 70 Even worse, some might be misunderstood.

- A. Take turns to speak.
- B. Some jokes may be seen as impolite.
- C. Here is some advice to improve communication.
- D. It can be very difficult to speak English very well.
- E. It is better to speak by using well-known words and expressions.
