With the seasons changing, now is the perfect time to start planning summer experiences at outdoor theatres in parks, city squares, woodlands and even the side of a cliff! We've put together a list of the best ones to visit across the UK.

Grosvenor Park, Chester

Every summer, Storyhouse theatre packs up their items and builds an entire amphitheatre (圆形剧场) in Grosvenor Park. This year's programme sees an eclectic trio:

The Gangs of New York, The Importance of Being Earnest and The Wizard of Oz. I'm most excited by the first: a new adaptation written by Kieran Lynn and directed by John Young. I don't think this story has ever been staged before and it seems like a wild pick for a summer outdoor show.

Minack Theatre, Cornwall

Built into a cliff face in Porthcurno, you hardly need an excuse to visit this theatre. Seeing anything at all, backgrounded by the azure Cornish sea, will be an unforgettable experience. This year sees touring productions of Little Shop of Horrors, and the less-known works of Shakespeare.

Pitlochry Festival Theatre, Highland Perthshire

Throughout most of the year, the Pitlochry Festival Theatre's indoor concert hall and studio serve as their regular performance spaces. But this summer, you can see equally lavish productions at the amphitheatre, located in the woods and overlooking Ben-Y-Vrackie mountain. This year they'll be staging Dido and Aeneas.

Shakespeare in the Squares, London

Is there anything more luxuriously summery than lazing down to your local square for a bit of Shakespeare and a picnic? These guys do what they say on the tin, travelling across the squares of London with a new Shakespeare production every year. This year will be All's Well That Ends Well.

1. Which play fascinates the author most?

A. The Gangs of New York.

B. The Importance of Being Earnest.

C. The Wizard of Oz.

D. Little Shop of Horrors.

2. Where can you enjoy a play in the Pitlochry Festival Theatre this summer?

A. On the cliff.

B. In the woods.

C. At a concert hall.

D. On city squares.

3. What is a proper choice for a Shakespeare fan?

A. Grosvenor Park and Pitlochry Festival Theatre.

B. Pitlochry Festival Theatre and Minack Theatre.

C. Minack Theatre and Shakespeare in the Squares.

D. Pitlochry Festival Theatre and Shakespeare in the Squares.

B

I teach English in developing countries. One day, while I was traveling alone, I saw a teenager selling paintings on the street. He called out to me, saying that he made all the pictures himself, and he was saving up money for school. In a different city, I might have bought one, but I figured that he could be some sort of scam artist, so I thanked him and kept walking. As I left, he asked if I had just a bit of change to spare. I did, but I told him no.

After a few hours of shopping and roaming, I found myself back on the same street. Everyone was shouting and everyone looked really excited, and it seemed they were celebrating a special festival. I tried to leave down a side alley, but it was full of people shoving each other. A group of at least six policemen was walking right toward the crowd. They were clearly trying to keep the order, and I had walked right into the middle of it.

Suddenly, I heard a voice yell at me from a half-opened door. "Hey!" I didn't know who it was, but I knew right away that this was someone trying to help me. I rushed toward the door and saw the face of that teenaged artist. He opened the door enough for me to enter, and I did. He said he'd recognized me from before. I asked him why he wanted to help me, and he just shrugged.

As we waited for the noises outside to die down, he gave me a tour of the place. It was truly beautiful. He didn't try to sell me anything or demand any sort of payment for his help. When finally it was a good time to leave, I asked if I could buy one of his multicolored landscapes, and it was a way to have something to remember him by. I still have that landscape up on my wall. When I look at it, I think about the warm-hearted young artist.

4. What can be inferred about the author from paragraph 1?

A. He was saving up money.

B. He thought he met cheating.

C. He had no change with him.

D. He had bought a painting before.

5. What happened to the author in paragraph 2?

- A. He got injured on the way back.
- B. He called the police for help.
- C. He was engaged in the activity.
- D. He was trapped in the crowd.

6. Why did the teenaged artist open the door for the author?

- A. He was curious about the author.
- B. He had to ask the author for a favor.
- C. He recognized and assisted the author.
- D. He invited the author to enjoy his works.

7. What impressed the author most?

- A. The beauty of the place.
- B. The young artist's talents.
- C. The multicolored landscapes.
- D. The young artist's kindness.

C

Monarch butterflies are native to North America, and their range extends from southern Canada to northern South America. Every year, thousands of monarch butterflies travel between 1,200 and 2,800 miles across the Americas on an awe-inspiring migratory journey, which is among the most remarkable scenes of animal migration in the world. In the process of finding food, monarch butterflies pollinate plants across the Americas, spreading pollen (花粉) from flower to flower and therefore playing an integral part in sustaining ecosystems.

But these bright orange and white creatures have neared the edge of extinction in the past century. The plains and mountains where monarch butterflies once flourished have drastically changed, mostly due to urbanisation. Illegal logging activity has degraded the forest areas in the past three decades, cutting down the Oyamel fir tree on which monarchs hibernate in the winters. Pesticides not only kill off milkweed plants, but also harm the butterflies themselves. Lastly, the climate change also poses a threat to the habitats where monarchs breed and spend the winter.

To protect the monarchs from extinction, governments have taken positive actions. Communities also help protect monarch butterflies by planting milkweed in their gardens along their migratory routes. Milkweed is highly decorative and easy to grow in harmony with flower beds. Gardeners ensure to plant local milkweed to prevent spreading parasitic (寄生的) infections. According to experts, it is ideal to plant milkweed in the fall and to plant them in sunny areas, without using pesticides as this will harm the butterflies and their eggs.

The joint work from federal and state agencies and communities to conserve these creatures and their habitats has paid off. More monarchs are being spotted in some areas currently. If this work is eventually successful, there may come a time when monarch numbers increase once again.

8. What critical roles do the monarchs play?

- A. Benefiting the tourism.
- B. Leading a new migration route.

C. Maintaining the ecosystem. D. Bettering the agriculture practices.

9. What largely causes the monarchs to become endangered?

- A. Infectious diseases. B. Natural disasters.
C. Human activities. D. Severe desertification.

10. What advice is given to gardeners in planting milkweeds?

- A. Choosing the native ones. B. Planting them in summer.
C. Keeping them out of the sunshine. D. Using pesticides when necessary.

11. What is the author's attitude to the future of the monarchs?

- A. Optimistic. B. Uncertain. C. Doubtful. D. Indifferent.

D

Stress is a modern epidemic, but among all the stress management strategies out there we are forgetting one essential solution—taking time for rest.

For a long time, psychology was based on a clear division between body and mind. Psychologists focused almost only on what went on between our ears. The body was not their responsibility. That was the work of medical doctors and gym instructors. Recently, however, there has been a growing realisation within psychology circles that the body and mind are deeply related to each other, far more than anyone ever imagined. The most recent insights have revealed that our mental health is determined to a large extent by our physical condition.

When you are feeling poorly, you can combat it by taking better care of your body. Physical exercise helps to relieve depression. A healthy sleeping pattern also offers protection against all kinds of psychological disorders, and a healthy diet is known to reduce stress. Moments of rest and relaxation ought to occupy a more prominent place in our lives. These significant moments should not be regarded as a kind of “waste of time” in between jobs but as a natural and fundamental part of our way of life. Rest is actually crucial to our wellbeing and is good for both body and mind. We all need at least a little time to think, to reflect on life and even just to be bored.

At school, the key should not only be that you have to do your very best every day, but also that you can only perform at your peak when you are adequately rested. It is only when we fully embrace rest that we will be able to take a stand against stress and burnout.

Your free time is meant for relaxation and recovery. Active free time is spent on things like hobbies, sport, friends and family. The other one is passive free time: reading, watching TV, resting. Ideally you get to enjoy both—one to divert your attention from work and the other to regroup and recover.

12. What do psychologists focus on recently?

- A. Ways to define psychology. B. Strategies to handle mental condition.

C. Responsibilities for health.

D. The relation between body and mind.

13. What does the underlined word “prominent” in paragraph 3 mean?

A. Famous.

B. Important.

C. Sustainable.

D. Passionate.

14. How can one reduce the pressure according to the author?

A. By getting enough sleep.

B. By going on a diet.

C. By having a strong willpower.

D. By centering more on work.

15. What is the best title of the passage?

A. What determines your mental health?

B. How physical health affects our mind?

C. The power of rest for stress management.

D. The difference between active and passive rest.

Keeping a schedule can help you manage your time and be productive. 16 With a few graffiti (涂鸦) in your planner or tabs on your screen, you can have an efficient plan for the day in no time. Keep reading to learn how to schedule your day and be as productive as possible.

Check your planner throughout the day. Make it a habit to check your planner every morning and night to stay on task and prepare for the day ahead. This way, you can always be on top of the game and know what's to come—it's a great way to stay motivated. Schedule alarms to remind you of certain tasks. 18

Adjust your schedule as needed. Although you should try sticking to your schedule as much as possible, things happen, and adjustments may be needed. Don't hesitate to move flexible or low-priority items to other time periods. 19 You're only human. Focus on high-priority or timely items, and worry about the rest later.

Reward yourself when you've completed your tasks. Who says you have to be strict all of the time? If you've completed all your tasks for the day, don't hesitate to reward yourself. 20 It also gives you time to rest and recharge, especially after a busy day.

第二节(满分 25 分)

47. 阅读下面材料，根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写一段，使其构成一篇完整的短文。

I was sitting in my eighth-grade literature class when Mrs. Smith announced a new project. In groups of four members, we were to create a presentation about the book we were reading.

On a piece of paper, we wrote the names of three friends we wanted in our group. After collecting all the requests, Mrs. Smith informed us that she would take into consideration the names we chose and would let us know the results the next day. I had no doubt I would get the group of my choice. There were only a handful of sociably decent people in the class, and I knew we had chosen each other.

The next day, after the bell rang, Mrs. Smith started to call out names. With butterflies in my stomach, I was expecting the perfect result. Suddenly, I heard my name “Emily” followed by “Mike, Julie and Cathy”. I could feel the tears well up in my eyes. How could I face being in that group. They are not in the circle of my “good” friends. They are always thought as the “misfits” of our class, who are not so smart, look weird and even have difficulties in fitting in with others. Oh, how badly I wanted to be with my friends.

I fought back tears as I walked up to Mrs. Smith. I was determined to convince her I should be in the “good” group. She gently placed a hand on my shoulder. “I know what you want, Emily, ”she said, “Give yourself a chance to see your group members in a new light. Cooperate with each other, and your group shares an equal chance of winning an A. ”I was stunned. “Do you have faith in yourself and your group members?”She asked. I stood straighter. “Yes,” I replied. I couldn’t believe it came out of my mouth, but it did.

注意：

(1)续写词数应为 100 个左右；

(2)请按如下格式在答题纸的相应位置作答。

During our first group meeting, I was extremely surprised.

With the seasons changing, now is the perfect time to start planning summer experiences at outdoor theatres in parks, city squares, woodlands and even the side of a cliff! We've put together a list of the best ones to visit across the UK.

Grosvenor Park, Chester

Every summer, Storyhouse theatre packs up their items and builds an entire amphitheatre (圆形剧场) in Grosvenor Park. This year's programme sees an eclectic trio:

The Gangs of New York, The Importance of Being Earnest and The Wizard of Oz. I'm most excited by the first: a new adaptation written by Kieran Lynn and directed by John Young. I don't think this story has ever been staged before and it seems like a wild pick for a summer outdoor show.

Minack Theatre, Cornwall

Built into a cliff face in Porthcurno, you hardly need an excuse to visit this theatre. Seeing anything at all, backgrounded by the azure Cornish sea, will be an unforgettable experience. This year sees touring productions of Little Shop of Horrors, and the less-known works of Shakespeare.

Pitlochry Festival Theatre, Highland Perthshire

Throughout most of the year, the Pitlochry Festival Theatre's indoor concert hall and studio serve as their regular performance spaces. But this summer, you can see equally lavish productions at the amphitheatre, located in the woods and overlooking Ben-Y-Vrackie mountain. This year they'll be staging Dido and Aeneas.

Shakespeare in the Squares, London

Is there anything more luxuriously summery than lazing down to your local square for a bit of Shakespeare and a picnic? These guys do what they say on the tin, travelling across the squares of London with a new Shakespeare production every year. This year will be All's Well That Ends Well.

1. Which play fascinates the author most?

A. The Gangs of New York.

B. The Importance of Being Earnest.
