

PRACTICE TEST 3

ANSWER SHEET

Last Name: _____ First Name: _____

Date: _____ Testing Location: _____

Directions for Test

- Remove these answer sheets from the book and use them to record your answers to this test.
- This test will require 3 hours and 20 minutes to complete. Take this test in one sitting.
- The time allotment for each section is written clearly at the beginning of each section. This test contains six 25-minute sections, two 20-minute sections, and one 10-minute section.
- This test is 25 minutes shorter than the actual SAT, which will include a 25-minute “experimental” section that does not count toward your score. That section has been omitted from this test.
- You may take one short break during the test, of no more than 10 minutes in length.
- You may only work on one section at any given time.
- You must stop ALL work on a section when time is called.
- If you finish a section before the time has elapsed, check your work on that section. You may NOT work on any other section.
- Do not waste time on questions that seem too difficult for you.
- Use the test book for scratchwork, but you will receive credit only for answers that are marked on the answer sheets.
- You will receive one point for every correct answer.
- You will receive no points for an omitted question.
- For each wrong answer on any multiple-choice question, your score will be reduced by $\frac{1}{4}$ point.
- For each wrong answer on any “numerical grid-in” question, you will receive no deduction.

When you take the real SAT, you will be asked to fill in your personal information in grids as shown below.

ESSAY

Time—25 minutes

Write your essay on separate sheets of standard lined paper.

The essay gives you an opportunity to show how effectively you can develop and express ideas. You should therefore take care to develop your point of view, present your ideas logically and clearly, and use language precisely.

Your essay must be written on the lines provided on your answer sheet—you will receive no other paper on which to write. You will have enough space if you write on every line, avoid wide margins, and keep your handwriting to a reasonable size. Remember that people who are not familiar with your handwriting will read what you write. Try to write or print so that what you are writing is legible to those readers.

Important reminders:

- A pencil is required for the essay. An essay written in ink will receive a score of zero.
- Do not write your essay in your test book. You will receive credit only for what you write on your answer sheet.
- An off-topic essay will receive a score of zero.

You have twenty-five minutes to write an essay on the topic assigned below.

Consider carefully the issue discussed in the following passage, then write an essay that answers the question posed in the assignment.

Many among us like to blame violence and immorality in the media for a “decline in morals” in society. Yet these people seem to have lost touch with logic. Any objective examination shows that our society is far less violent or exploitative than virtually any society in the past. Early humans murdered and enslaved each other with astonishing regularity, without the help of gangsta rap or Jerry Bruckheimer films.

Assignment: Do violence and immorality in the media make our society more dangerous and immoral? Write an essay in which you answer this question and discuss your point of view on this issue. Support your position logically with examples from literature, the arts, history, politics, science and technology, current events, or your experience or observation.

If you finish before time is called, you may check your work on this section only.
Do not turn to any other section in the test.

SECTION 2
Time—25 minutes
20 questions

Turn to Section 2 of your answer sheet to answer the questions in this section.

Directions: For this section, solve each problem and decide which is the best of the choices given. Fill in the corresponding circle on the answer sheet. You may use any available space for scratchwork.

Notes

1. The use of a calculator is permitted.
2. All numbers used are real numbers.
3. Figures that accompany problems in this test are intended to provide information useful in solving the problems. They are drawn as accurately as possible EXCEPT when it is stated in a specific problem that the figure is not drawn to scale. All figures lie in a plane unless otherwise indicated.
4. Unless otherwise specified, the domain of any function f is assumed to be the set of all real numbers x for which $f(x)$ is a real number.

The passages below are followed by questions based on their content; questions following a pair of related passages may also be based on the relationship between the paired passages. Answer the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passage and in any introductory material that may be provided.

Questions 9–12 are based on the following passages.

The following is from President Bill Clinton's first inaugural address.

Today, a generation raised in the shadows of the Cold War assumes new responsibilities in a world warmed by the sunshine of freedom, but threatened still by ancient hatreds and new plagues. Raised in unrivaled prosperity, we inherit an economy that is still the world's strongest, but is weakened by business failures, stagnant wages, increasing inequality, and deep divisions among our own people. When George Washington first took the oath I have just sworn to uphold, news traveled slowly across the land by horseback, and across the ocean by boat. Now the sights and sounds of this ceremony are broadcast instantaneously to billions around the world. Communications and commerce are global. Investment is mobile. Technology is almost magical, and ambition for a better life is now universal.

The following is a commentary on America written in 2005 by an American writer.

The people of the world, save the majority of our own citizens, are growing to appreciate the difference between America and the United States. America is the heart and mind of the world. It is an ideal to which all free-thinking men and women aspire. It is the spirit of hope, freedom, vision and creativity. But the United States, at least since the turn of the century, has become something different. It constantly grasps at the cloak of America, but this cloak fits our current leaders quite poorly. Our leaders have become dominated by fear and its value as a political tool. They speak incessantly of freedom but revel in repression. They speak of a "culture of life" but revel in the culture of siege and war. The hope, freedom, vision and creativity of America have slipped through their fingers, and they have little hope of recapturing it. In America, that task is left to the people.

9. The word "unrivaled" in line 5 most nearly means
- (A) without enemies
 (B) supremely abundant
 (C) militarily superior
 (D) unimaginable
 (E) highly intelligent
10. Which of the following best describes the contrast between the "people" (line 9) as characterized in Passage 1 and the "citizens" (line 20) as characterized in Passage 2?
- (A) the "people" are ignorant, while the "citizens" are well educated
 (B) the "people" lack fortitude, while the "citizens" are courageous
 (C) the "people" are worldly, while the "citizens" are parochial
 (D) the "people" are proud of their leaders, while the "citizens" are not
 (E) the "people" lack unity, while the "citizens" lack awareness

- (A) contrasts an ideal with a reality
 - (B) explains a study
 - (C) compares the past with the present
 - (D) describes an injustice
 - (E) acknowledges a responsibility

Questions 13–19 are based on the following passage.

The following passage is adapted from a short story published by a Russian author in the late 1970s.

What is all this? he thought, terrified. And yet . . . do I love her, or don't I? That is the question!

But she, now that the most important and difficult thing had at last been said, breathed lightly and freely. She, too, stood up and, looking straight into Ognev Alexeyich's face, began to talk quickly, irrepressibly and ardently.

Just as a man who is suddenly overwhelmed by terror cannot afterwards remember the exact order of sounds accompanying the catastrophe which stuns him, Ognev could not remember Vera's words and phrases. His memory retained only the substance of her speech itself and the sensation her speech produced in him. He remembered her voice, as though it were choked and slightly hoarse from excitement, and the extraordinary music and passion of her intonation. Crying, laughing, the tears glittering on her eyelashes, she was telling him that even from the first days of their acquaintance she had been struck by his originality, his intellect, his kind intelligent eyes, with the aims and objects of his life; that she had fallen passionately, madly and deeply in love with him; that whenever she had happened to come into the house from the garden that summer and had seen his coat in the vestibule or heard his voice in the distance, her heart had felt a cold thrill of delight, a foretaste of happiness; that even the silliest jokes made her laugh helplessly, and in each figure of his copybook she could see something extraordinarily clever and grandiose; that his knotted walking stick seemed to her more beautiful than the trees.

The forest and the wisps of fog and the black ditches alongside the road seemed to fall silent, listening to her, but something bad and strange was taking place in Ognev's heart. . . . Vera was enchantingly beautiful as she told him of her love, she spoke with eloquence and passion, but much as he wanted to, he could feel no joy, no fundamental happiness, but only compassion for Vera, and pain and regret that a good human being should be suffering because of him. The Lord only knows whether it was his bookish mind that now began to speak, or whether he was affected by that irresistible habit of objectivity which so often prevents people from living, but Vera's raptures and suffering seemed to him only cloying and trivial. At the same time he was outraged with himself and something whispered to him that what he was now seeing and hearing was, from the point of view of human nature and his personal happiness, more important than any statistics, books or philosophical truths . . . And he was annoyed and blamed himself even though he himself did not understand why he was to blame.

Questions 20–24 are based on the following passage.

The following is part of an introduction to the publication of a speech delivered by President Lyndon B. Johnson in the 1960s.

Line “Somehow you never forget what poverty and hatred can do when you see its scars on the hopeful face of a young child.” So spoke President Lyndon B. Johnson in the course of 5 one of the most deeply felt, and deeply moving, addresses ever delivered by an American president. The date was March 15th, 1965; the occasion was an extraordinary joint session at 10 night of the Senate and the House of Representatives, televised across the nation. It was the “time of Selma”—only a few days after the historic mass demonstration in support of voter registration in Alabama, in which many of the peaceful marchers were physically at-15 tacked and one of them, a white clergyman from the north, was killed. The nation itself was a shocked witness, via television, of much of that unforgettable scene: the long rows of marchers, a cross section of African Americans 20 and whites, Californians and New Yorkers, resolutely striding, smiling, singing to hide their exhaustion, trying not to see the hate-twisted faces and shouting menace of the sidewalk crowd, trying not to fear the armored 25 troopers and police with their notorious supporting artillery of dogs, clubs, and cattle prods.

This was the moment chosen by the President, himself a Southerner with a reputation 30 for compromise, to bear witness before the nation, and to call upon his former associates of Congress to stand up and be counted with him—more specifically, to take action on a bill which would correct the conspicuous 35 weakness of the 1964 Civil Rights Bill, its failure to protect the right of African Americans to vote “when local officials are determined to deny it.” In forthright terms, President Johnson spelled out the full cruelty and ingenuity

40 of that discrimination, and crisply defined the central issue involved: “There is no Constitutional issue here. The command of the Constitution is plain. There is no moral issue. It is wrong—deadly wrong—to deny any of your 45 fellow Americans the right to vote in this country. There is no issue of state’s rights or national rights. There is only the struggle for human rights.”

The President spoke slowly, solemnly, with 50 unmistakable determination. His words and his manner were perfectly synchronized; indeed he made the nationwide audience aware of how deeply personal the issue of African American rights was to him. He recalled his 55 own southern origins, and his shattering encounter with Mexican-American children as a young schoolteacher (“They never seemed to know why people disliked them, but they knew it was so because I saw it in their eyes.”) 60 He spoke more directly, more explicitly, and more warmly of the human experience of prejudice than any president before him. But he also placed the problem of African American rights in a broader frame of reference—65 that of poverty and ignorance, bigotry and fear. “Their cause must be our cause too.
Because it is not just African Americans, but really it’s all of us, who must overcome the crippling legacy of bigotry and injustice. And 70 we shall overcome.”

(1) While known when he was the President for his abundant energy and muscular build as an adult, Theodore Roosevelt's build as a child was actually quite puny. (2) Stricken with asthma, he was taught early that strenuous physical activity might be dangerous to his health and that, in fact, it might even be fatal. (3) Determined to overcome this obstacle, Roosevelt trained his body relentlessly and built his impressive girth through sheer grit and determination. (4) That these childhood passions stayed with him throughout his adult life should not be surprising. (5) Physical activities, though, were not the only childhood fascination to play a prominent role later in his life.

(6) A skilled hunter, Roosevelt spent much of his leisure time hunting various forms of game. (7) Beginning during his undergraduate days at Harvard, he spent significant time in snow-covered Maine forests as well as the arid deserts of the Dakota territory. (8) As a child, Theodore was so enraptured by birds, he would spend hours observing and writing about them, even phonetically spelling out their various calls and songs. (9) Upon reaching government office, Roosevelt became the first true conservationist, pushing for laws to protect wildlife and resources. (10) He cherished nature in all its forms, seeking to understand its variety through research and experience.

(11) By openly maintaining these passions while in political office, Roosevelt redefined the role of the American politician. (12) While his predecessors had often been aloof with regard to their own personal feelings, Roosevelt advertised his sense of morality by talking openly about it repeatedly with citizens and reporters in speeches and newspapers. (13) In the dawning of a new, industrialized age, Roosevelt chose to take on controversial issues, battling through the spoils system, disputes between management and labor, and the question of imperialism.

The passages below are followed by questions based on the content. Answer the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passage and in any introductory material that may be provided.

Questions 6–7 are based on the following passage.

The reverence for their goddess of protection accounts for the respect Navajos show to the women of their tribe. The tradition is that a man never lifts his hand against a woman, although it is not an unusual thing for a squaw to administer a sound thrashing to a warrior husband who has offended her. All of the sheep, which constitute the great wealth of the tribe, are owned by the women, and in the various families the line of descent is always on the side of the women. The Navajos have little or no idea of a future existence but are firm believers in the transmigration of souls. For this reason they have great reverence for different animals and birds, which are supposed to be the re-embodiment of departed spirits of Navajos.

6. Based on the information in the passage, with which of the following statements would the author most likely agree?
- (A) Navajo warriors obey their wives obsequiously.
 (B) Birds are a particularly vital food source for the Navajo.
 (C) A Navajo man who disrespects a woman would likely face censure.
 (D) The Navajo do not believe in reincarnation.
 (E) In the winter, the Navajo migrate to warmer climates.
7. The word “administer” in line 6 most nearly means
- (A) manage
 (B) maintain
 (C) govern
 (D) rehearse
 (E) dispense

Questions 8–9 are based on the following passage.

“Dying with dignity” is a topic that has inspired deep debate among the members of the medical community. Should an individual be allowed to determine when he or she wants to die? Should a person who is merely receiving palliative care that provides no hope of a cure be allowed to tell a doctor to stop all treatment so she can die in peace? How can a doctor know if a patient has the mental capacity to decide for herself that the time has come to stop fighting the disease? It is a challenging and persistent debate.

8. As used in line 6, “palliative” most nearly means
- (A) punitive
 (B) remedial
 (C) analgesic
 (D) curative
 (E) altruistic
9. The passage suggests that in cases of extreme illness, doctors may have difficulty in determining their patients’
- (A) state of mind
 (B) prognosis
 (C) quality of life
 (D) tolerance of pain
 (E) ability to remember facts

Questions 10–16 are based on the following passage.

The following passage is excerpted from a recent book about seismology, the study of earthquakes.

In the 1970s, there was great optimism about earthquake prediction. A few so-called earthquake precursors had come to light, and there was even a theory (known as dilatancy) put forth to explain many of the phenomena that come before a large earthquake. A series of foreshocks is an example of a precursor. However, since foreshocks look just like any other earthquakes, they are not in themselves very useful in prediction. From all points around the globe, there are numerous anecdotal reports about other precursors, earthquake folklore, if you will.

Many widely reported earthquake precursors are related to groundwater. A few hours before a large earthquake, marked changes have been reported in the level or flow of wells and springs. Groundwater has also reportedly changed temperature, become cloudy, or acquired a bad taste. Occasionally, electrostatic phenomena such as earthquake lights (similar to St. Elmo's fire that appears on ships during electrical storms) and changes in the local magnetic field have been reported. Anecdotal reports also persistently include the strange behavior of animals, which might be linked to electrostatic phenomena or foreshocks. Changes in strain and creep (silent tectonic motion, without accompanying earthquake) along a fault normally locked by friction could also be considered precursors.

In China in the 1970s, it became popular for people to predict earthquakes using "backyard" measurements such as the monitoring of well levels and observation of farm animals. At least one earthquake, the Haicheng quake in 1975, was successfully predicted and a town evacuated, proving that, at least in some cases, earthquake prediction is possible. The Haicheng earthquake had hundreds of foreshocks, making it an easier-than-average earthquake to predict. Groundwater changes and anomalous animal behavior were also reported (for example, hibernating snakes supposedly awoke and froze to death). In China, "evacuation" meant that compulsory outdoor movies were shown, so that when the quake did happen and the town was severely damaged, no one was killed. But Chinese seismologists missed predicting the catastrophic Tangshan earthquake, in which at least 250,000 reportedly perished.

10. Which of the following is the best title for this passage?
- (A) The Effects of Earthquakes on Groundwater
 (B) The Search for Earthquake Precursors
 (C) A Novel Theory of the Origin of Earthquakes
 (D) A History of Chinese Earthquakes
 (E) How Animals Anticipate Earthquakes
11. The passage indicates that foreshocks are "not . . . very useful" (lines 9–10) in predicting earthquakes because they
- (A) are exceptionally difficult to detect
 (B) occur simultaneously with changes in groundwater
 (C) are not part of the theory of dilatancy
 (D) interfere with electrostatic phenomena
 (E) are impossible to distinguish from earthquakes themselves

12. According to the passage, which of the following features of groundwater have been reported to change immediately prior to an earthquake (lines 16–20)?
- I. density
 - II. clarity
 - III. flow
- (A) II only
(B) III only
(C) I and II only
(D) II and III only
(E) I, II, and III
13. Which of the following could be considered a logical inconsistency in the passage?
- (A) The passage states that foreshocks are not useful predictors of earthquakes but then cites foreshocks as instrumental to predicting an earthquake.
(B) The passage says that the Chinese are interested in predicting earthquakes but then says that they were devastated by the Tangshan earthquake.
(C) The passage reports that animals behaved strangely before an earthquake but then attributes this behavior to electrostatic phenomena.
(D) The passage states that the town of Haicheng was safely evacuated but then says that its citizens were forced to watch outdoor movies.
(E) The passage suggests that both strain and creep could be considered earthquake precursors.
14. Which of the following best describes the function of the third paragraph?
- (A) to describe an application of a theory
(B) to provide an alternative perspective
(C) to recount a scientific experiment
(D) to summarize the ancient origins of a theory
(E) to demonstrate the difficulties of employing a technique
15. The passage suggests that the Tangshan earthquake
- (A) was caused by strain and creep
(B) was preceded by changes in the groundwater
(C) caused more damage than the Haicheng earthquake did
(D) was preceded by several foreshocks
(E) was anticipated by the theory of dilatancy
16. In line 46, the word “evacuation” is placed in quotations in order to
- (A) imply that an action was ineffective
(B) indicate that it is an archaic term
(C) emphasize the primitiveness of Chinese scientific methods
(D) suggest that a certain practice was unconventional
(E) underscore that an action was intended, but not implemented
