AC. angle AD. copy BC. noticed BD. changing CD. Additionally

Twenty years ago only a very small number of people had the skills and equipment to make fake money. Today computer, copier and printer technology is so advancing that almost anyone can make fake money. With the new technology there is a new kind of casual faking machine. The number of bills made by casual fakers on their home and office computer is growing fast. In fact, this number has doubled every year since 1989! There is no way to stop casual faking completely. But the government has recently found a few ways to make casual faking very difficult.

One way is to put very, very small words, called microprints, in many places on the bill. The words are only 6/1000 inch. No one can read them without a magnifying glass, and they are too small to come out on a copier. If someone copies a bill that has microprints, the microprint words on the bill will only be black lines.

Another way to stop people from making fake money on their home computers is to use special colour-changing ink. Money printed with this ink will look green from the front and yellow from the back. Home computers cannot use colour-changing ink. Copies from a home computer only have normal ink and that can be copied quite easily.

38, money is made on special paper with very fine pieces of red and blue silk mixed in. And on each bill there is a special line that runs from the top to the bottom. The lines turn red if you put it under a special light. This line and this special paper with red and blue silk are not easy to copy. 39.

The government must try many different ways to stop making fake money. It needs to keep the way money is made because if fakers can learn to copy the changes, today's copiers cannot copy microprinted words or colour-changing ink. But, in a few years, who knows?

In this small town, there was not a single man of importance who would dare to have a housekeeper younger than sixty, for fear of what people might say about them. I was 41, however.

When I needed a housekeeper, I chose a girl called Bridie Casey, a lovely little girl of seventeen from a village up the coast.

I 42 my choice carefully. I drove my car to the coast one day when she was at home. I had a look at the cottage and a talk with her mother, and a cup of tea. After that I did not need any more to say that she was 43. I knew if there was anything Bridie did not do 44 as a house keeper, her mother would not long to correct her. At last, there was only one 46 to Mark was an 11-year-old orphan (孤儿) who lived with his aunt, a bitter middle aged woman greatly annoyed with the burden of caring for her ~~deader~~'s son. Still, with all the scolding and coldness at home, he was a sweet and gentle child.

I had not noticed Mark particularly until he began staying after class each day to help me straighten up the room. We did this quietly and comfortably, not speaking much, but enjoying the solitude (幽静) of that hour of the day.

I explained how he had been my best helper. "Was making you a surprise," he whispered confidentially "It's for Christmas."

Finally came the last school day before Christmas. Mark crept lowly into the room late that afternoon with his hands concealing (隐藏) something behind his back. "Have your present," he said timidly when I looked up. He held out his hands, and there lying in his small palms was a tiny wooden box.

"It's beautiful, Mark. Is there something?" I asked opening t he top to look inside.

“Oh you can’t see what’s in it, he replied, “and you can’t touch it, or taste it or feel it, but mother always said it makes you feel good all the time, warm on cold nights, and safe when you’re all alone.”

I gazed into the empty box. “What is Mark,” I asked gently, “that will make me feel good?” “It’s love,” he whispered softly, “and mother always said it’s best when you give away.” And he turned and quietly left the room. It was the best present I never had before.

- A. Mark gave a present to the author to show his love
- B. Mark wanted to make friends with the author
- C. the writer was not interested in Mark's gift
- D. the writer refused the gift at last

Finding a job can be difficult but it doesn't have to be demanding. Many people think that the only way to find a job is by a "now hiring" sign shaking in the air. And although walk-ins are a good way to find a job, there are other many new separate ways with more chances.

A job centre is a good way to find a job. You can go to any job office, and somebody will be ready to help you fix the job. Weigh your education and even overture specified monetary assistance if needed.

Newspapers are a good way to find a job. It's not only readily offered for you along with your entertainment, but it help you find a job in community and nearby. Not only can you just find a job in the newspaper, but you can also spread around yourself for proprietors (经营者) out there who may be looking for big name (like you) to find a point.

Friends and family members are always readily and can help you
