Once upon a time, there was a poor man and a rich man. The poor man's son was named Ham, and the rich man's son was named Jim. They had been in the same school together since childhood and became good friends.

One day, the two youths began a discussion as to whether wealth or effort was more powerful. Jim said that wealth was most important, while Ham declared for effort. At last, Ham declared, "Let us put it to the test: Let us both go to some far country and try whether wealth or effort is more successful." Jim agreed to this plan and they fixed a day for starting.

Then they both went home and collected some money and started off early one morning. After a time, they came to a certain country where Ham suggested that they should look for employment. But Jim did not like the notion of becoming a servant and he said that he would live on the money which he had brought with him, which would last for a year or two. "You may do as you like," answered Ham, "but for my part, I must look for work." So he went to a village and found employment as a teacher in a school while his friend rented a house and started making various friends, eating and having fun all day.

One year later, Ham earned enough money, built a beautiful house and also got married. However, Jim had already spent all his money, and his friends who indulged in wine and meat also left him. Hungry and sorrowful, he went to Ham and said, "My dear friend, regarding the question of 'wealth or effort is more important', I think I've already had the answer."

Children seem to care so much about their names. A study shows that most of young people wish their parents had given them a different name.

Some people choose to change their names when they grow up. Many people in show business don't use the names their parents gave them. Have you ever listened to Joanne? No? The answer could be "yes" if we call her stage name instead! You may never heard of Margaret. But if we tell you her stage name, you might know her as a famous dancer.

In many cultures, there are special ideas about how to choose a name. For example, many people choose a name that has been in their family for many years. It tells the child where he or she comes from.

Choosing a good name isn't easy. Many parents search books that tell them the meanings of names. They could choose a name that carries a message. For example, Edith means "valuable gift". Amanda means "love". And Fara means "joy".

Names like these tell family and friends how happy they are with their new baby. Other names can say something about the events during the birth of the child. In Africa, a first born son may have the name Mosi and the name Ama means "born on Saturday".

Is every boy called Curtis polite? And is every girl called Mahira quick and full of energy? No parents can tell what kind of person their child will grow up to be. Just because parents name a boy Fahim, it doesn't mean he will be clever. All they can do is hope.

28. What can we know about the study?

- A. Young kids don't care about their future.
- B. Most of young people care about their names.
- C. Most girls want to change their names.
- D. Most parents want to rename by themselves.

,29. Why is "Joanne" mentioned in paragraph 2?

- A. To prove some people hope to be renamed.
- B. To introduce a famous dancer to readers.
- C. To introduce her true name.
- D. To tell the benefit of name.

30. Why is it difficult to choose a good name?

- A. Kids always want to rename.

- B. Parents want to choose a meaningful name.
- C. Parents aren't sure if their kids will like the name.
- D. It is hard to change kids' names.

31. What is the best title for the text?
- A. Names can never influence our lives
 - B. Methods to choose a suitable name
 - C. Love your parents, love your name
 - D. Your parents' wish is behind names

Many Silicon Valley parents are becoming more concerned about preventing their children from using screens. Some parents think that even a little screen time can be extremely addictive, so it is better if their children avoid using or seeing these devices completely. However, it is difficult for working adults in the 21st century to give up using a phone at home. So, it's simpler to employ someone to do this.

“Silicon Valley nanny(保姆)”, who takes children back to a time without screens every day is widely needed. From Cupertino to San Francisco, it's widely agreed that screen time is harmful to youngsters. Therefore, parents are requesting nannies to keep phones, tablets and computers in a hidden place. Others even offer no-phone agreements.

Research shows that spending too much time on technology can harm young minds. For example, teenagers who use social media frequently are more likely to feel depressed and anxious. Insomnia (失眠) rates have also increased amongst this age group, and an increasing number of children display the signs that they can't focus attention. These seemingly minor(轻微的)problems could become significant challenges for future generations.

“Many parents come back home and focus on their smartphones, ignoring whatever their children are trying to say,” said Shannon Zimmerman, who works as a nanny in San Jose for families that forbid screen time. “As a nanny, I also call on more parents to spend more time with their kids.”

32. Why are the Silicon Valley nannies greatly needed according to the text?
- A. To help parents and children balance work and life.
 - B. To keep children away from screens.
 - C. To teach children how to use technology responsibly.
 - D. To encourage children to exercise.
33. What is the result of spending too much time on screens for teenagers?
- A. Feeling confused.
 - B. Feeling bored.
 - C. Feeling anxious.
 - D. Feeling nervous.

34. What does Shannon suggest parents do?

A. Encourage their children more.

B. Play games with their children.

C. Stop using smartphones at home.
children.

D. Spend more time with their

35. What is the text about?

- A. Parents concern about screen time for children.
- B. Children are addicted to screen time.
- C. All parents limit children to phones.
- D. Science has no effects on young minds.

In several nations, including India, Pakistan, Vietnam and Cambodia, milk tea is a common drink 36 However, the addition quickly became a habit, and for the majority of people, it became an addiction. But do you know that this type of tea can be extremely bad for you if over-consumed? Here are some of its side effects.

Milk tea can cause insomnia (失眠)

Like coffee, tea, specifically black tea, which is what is used to brew milk tea is rich in caffeine. When your body is overloaded with caffeine, it can cause sleep disorders like insomnia. While small quantities will not do this, drinking an excess of more than two cups a day can cause major sleep issues. Drinking milk tea can also cause other health problems 37

Excessive (过多的) milk tea consumption causes anxiety

 38 However, the side effects of drinking too much milk tea sometimes can also be anxiety. This is because tea can activate the brain cells to calm you down but when you push it and drink too much, it can create an imbalance in brain chemicals which leads to anxiety.

 39

When taken in small dosages (剂量), milk tea can help strengthen your immune system, brain and nerve functions, circulation and heart health. However, if you consume too much of the drink, it either causes high blood pressure or too low blood pressure. This could be harmful to your health.

Milk tea can make you addicted

The side effect of milk tea is that it can cause addiction. The substance caffeine is thought to be addictive. In other words, if you often drink it, you would feel uneasy without a cup.

 40 . This is exactly the addiction.

- A. As a result, you drink milk tea more frequently
- B. Milk tea may lead to blood pressure imbalance
