How do we know the time? A clock, a watch or a mobile phone can help us. However, many years ago there were no clocks and knowing the time was not so easy. Over the centuries, people have developed different ways of telling the time.

About 5,000 years ago, the Egyptians invented the sun clock. This was a tall stone building. Its shadow (影子) showed the movement of the sun. So people were able to know midday. The Egyptians made a sundial about 3,500 years ago. It was smaller than the sun clock and could let people know the time for half a day. On cloudy days or at night it was impossible to tell the time with a sun clock or a sundial. Water clocks were the first clocks not to use the sun. The idea is simple. Water flows (流动) from one bottle to another. When the water reaches a certain level, it shows the hours. The Egyptians used water clocks about 3,400 years ago. These clocks were popular in the Middle East and China. But they failed to make people know the exact time.

In the 13th century, the mechanical clock was invented. This was more exact, but it was expensive to make one. Over the next few centuries it was developed. For example, springs (

发条) were added around 1500 This enabled people to get the correct time and allowed clocks to be smaller In 1927, the first quartz clock was developed Clocks became cheaper to build It's also cheaper for ordinary people to own a clock People began depending on them more and more to run businesses, markets and so on More recently, in 1956, came the digital clock And nowadays satellites send our mobile phones the time to the exact second

There has been a lot of progress in timekeeping Clocks are always changing but some things never change Many of us still have trouble getting out of bed on time and not being late for school or work

One dollar and eighty - seven cents That was all Three times Della counted it One dollar and eighty - seven cents And the next day would be Christmas She could not afford a present, so she sat down and cried

Jim and Della had two possessions (财产) which they were both proud of One was Jim's gold watch that was from his father and his grandfather The other was Della's beautiful hair It fell about her, and reached below her know

Della put on her old brown jacket and her old brown hat Then she went out of the door and down the stairs to the street

She stopped at a store The sign in front of the store read "Hair Goods" "Will you buy my hair? " asked Della "Twenty dollars "the woman said

Then Della searched through the stores looking for a present for Jim

She found it at last It was a watch chain The bill was twenty - one dollars At seven o'clock , the coffee was made and dinner was ready Jim was never late Della heard his steps on the stairs

The door opened and Jim walked in He stopped inside the door His eyes were fixed on Della, and there was an expression in them that she could not read

"Jim, " she cried, "don't look at me that way I sold my hair to buy you a Christmas present "

Jim drew a box from his pocket and put it on the table

Della opened it There lay the set of combs (梳子) that she had always wanted Now they were hers, but her hair was gone

She smiled and held out Jim's present "I hunted all over town to find it Give me your watch I want to see how it looks on it"

Instead of obeying (服从) , Jim sat down, put his hands behind his head and smiled "Della, "he said, "I sold the watch to get the money to buy your combs"
